Notes for Sophronia Scott:

Obituary - From newsclipping (exact source unknown)

One by one we cross the river. Death has visited our midst and has robbed the community of one of its most noble women. Mrs. LaMaster, Aunt Fronie as every one knew her, died at her home near town Tuesday afternoon Oct 1st at one o'clock. We feel there is nothing we can say that would add to the beauty of the noble life which she lived during her illness which long and painful she never heard to complain and endured her suffering with christian fortitude and much patience and with resignation to God's will which was inspiring her many friends who visited her. She was the widow of the late B. J. LaMaster, who died several years ago. Six children, five sons and one daughter survive here. To them the sympathy of the whole community is extended and especially to the daughter, who had lately been bereft of her husband. Mrs. LaMaster was a good woman. She always had a pleasant word and smile for everyone she came in touch with. She was a devoted member of the Christian church, a kind, loving mother and friend of the poor. The funeral services were held at the Christian church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rey Roger, after which she was laid to rest beside her husband in the the cemetery here.

'Bid fairwell to your mother, sweet in her rest,

Weary with years, and worn with pain.

Bid her farewell 'till in some happy place.

You shall behold her sweet face again.

'Tis yours to miss her through all your years,

And tender memories of her keep.

Her's in the Lord to rest, for so,

He giveth His loved ones sleep."

Notes for Benjamin James LaMaster:

From Kentucky Genealogy and Biographies, Vol. VII, page 202

Benjamin Lamaster, a widely known farmer and stock dealer in Henry County, was born in the county near, New Castle, January 10, 1827, and is of French descent. He is the third child of a family of five sons and three daughters, born to Abram and Letitia (Tyler) Lamaster. His father was a native of Henry County, born in 1800, and by occupation was a well-to-do farmer and trader. He was a member of the Christian Church, and died in Henry County in 1845. Mrs. Letitia Lamaster was a native of Henry County, born in 1800, and died in April, 1885.

Subject's paternal grandfather, Joseph Lamaster, came from Virginia in an early day [This is incorrect. His paternal grandfather was James Lamaster who probably came from Charles County, Maryland.], settling in Henry County, where he resided until his death. He took part in the War of 1812, in the command of William Butler. His maternal grandfather, Charles Tyler, was a native of Virginia, came to Kentucky when it was yet a part of the Virginia Colony, and lived in Boonesboro for some time. He was an active part of the War of 1812 and participated in the battle of Tippecanoe, Ind., and Fort Moultrie, in the command of William O. Butler of Kentucky.

The early life of our subject was passed on the farm, and his education was received in the common schools of Henry County. He was married January 15, 1852, to Sophronia Scott, daughter of William Scott, on of Kentucky's early pioneers. Five sons and one daughter were born to this union: Walter, a graduated of Valparaiso, Ind., and of the Kentucky School of Medicine; John T., a graduate of Eminence, and now principal of a graded school in Boone County; Zachary H., a graduate of Transylvania University, Lexington, Kentucky; Benjamin I., student of the Columbia University, Boone County, Mo., and Mattie. Mr. Lamaster politically is a Democrat, as is a member of the Christian Church Campbellsburg. He has a farm of 284 acres on the New Castle and Carrollton Turnpike.

Following is a story by Nancy Bartlett Tandy LaMaster, husband of Fowler Orem LaMaster, related to me my Mary LaMaster, wife of Henry Carroll LaMaster. It was written by Bartlett in March 1985 when she was 89 years old.

Orem's grandfather, whose name was Ben, was in love with a girl named Sophronia Scott. Her father would not allow him to court her but one day when her parents were away he rode by on a mule and Sophronia was stirring lard in the yard. The parents were not at home so Ben got off his mule and persuaded Sophronia to run off with him and get married. She was 15 or 16 at the time [she was actually 20 when they married in 1852. See also the story below which is slightly different.]. She got on the mule with him and they rode to New Castle, the county seat of Henry Co. and they got a license and had the County Judge marry them. They went to housekeeping with only a copper kettle and a mule to start with. They rented a little log house near Ben's parents. Orem's father often said that his grandmother was a beautiful person with auburn hair and brown eyes. They eventually owned the family farm. They were staunch members of the Campbellsburg Christian Church. Their children were Mattie, Zack, John T., Benjamin and Levi. After though of Bartlett LaMaster: When I listed the children of Ben, Sr. and Sophronia, I forgot about Dr. Walter LaMaster who lived and practiced medicine in Columbia. He had a reputation of being a very fine doctor and I think he looked like most LaMasters, dark skin and brown eyes, all typically French.

This was a story contained in the papers of Nancy Bartlett Tandy LaMaster. It was probably written by either Nancy or Orem.

Benjamin LaMaster was a Southern sympathizer and was carrying mail to the Southern Army during the Civil War. The Union Army did not find out about the mail but he was turned in by his neighbor, Mr. Turner, and accused of trading horses for the Confederates. This was not true but he was put in jail and was supposed to be shot by a firing squad of Yankees. However, there were seven others and they drew for a blank. Benjamin drew the blank so he was released.

A bunch of Yankee bushwackers would often stop at the home place for Sophronia Scott LaMaster to cook for them. One day when they were snooping one of them fell into an old root cellar, which was in the yard, and it caved in on him. He was lost for sometime. When they heard his screams he had to be dug out.

According to the History of Henry County, Kentucky, by Maude Johnson Drane, the First Christian Church of Campbellsburg, built 1872, was financed almost entirely by Messrs. Jimmie Campbell, Tony Combs, Pryor Combs and Ben LaMaster.
